My work consists of a series of antique dishes that have been altered with the use of photo-transfers to create humorous commentary on the subject of Male Pride. I play with the perceptions of men and their own images of themselves. Without the use of nudity or overt sexuality, I turn the traditional male gaze back on man himself and away from the tradition of woman as object. With tongue and cheek humor I invite the viewer to consider man as object, man as the main course. Can we judge a man by the size of his catch? I will leave it for the viewer to decide.
